Meeting the challenges of Agriculture and Forestry with Commissioner Bob Odom

Help is available for Louisiana farmers who suffered crop losses and damages during tropical storm Allison, according to Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom.

Odom is advising farmers to call their local Farm Service Agency office or their crop insurance provider to report damages.

"In order to get assistance for their losses, producers must maintain contact with their crop insurance provider or the local FSA office," Odom says. "I can't stress enough, how important it is that our farmers report their damages immediately."

Early reports show most of the storm's damage occurred in southeast Louisiana, where some produce farmers are calling it a "total disaster."

"It totaled our tomatoes, cucumbers and bell peppers. Our cabbage is under water, the eggplants are bad off, and the jalapenos blew down," Tangipahoa Parish vegetable producer Anthony Liuzza said after the storm finally left. "We're trying to save some of it, but we are just fooling ourselves."

For specialty crop producers like Liuzza, the United States Department of Agriculture's FSA offices are now offering a Noninsured Assistance Program (NAP). Willie Cooper, FSA state director, says Congress passed special legislation last year to provide assistance to farmers who grow crops that aren't covered under typical crop insurance policies.

To qualify for the program, producers must notify their local FSA office immediately of any losses they incurred during the storm. Producers will be able to purchase NAP policies in the near future from FSA offices at a cost of $100 per crop, not to exceed $300 per parish or $900 in multiple parishes.

"Number one, if they've had damage to those crops and they want to be covered by assistance from FSA, they have to report that damage within 15 days of the occurrence of it," Cooper explains. "Secondly, they have to certify crop acreages no later than July 16."

Odom also notes that soybean producers around Lafayette will have to replant some beans that were originally planted just before Allison's arrival. County Agents in that area say the small beans were under water for four or five days.

"It's a shame that something we needed so much caused this damage to our vegetable and soybean producers," Odom says. "Many of our producers welcomed the rain, but we can't overlook those who got too much of a good thing."

LSU AgCenter Announces Changes

The LSU AgCenter recently announced the reassignment of several faculty members to positions that serve emerging needs in the state.

In making the announcement about these faculty appointments in water-related environmental education and community economic development positions, Dr. William B. Richardson, the LSU AgCenter chancellor, stressed the need for such programs.

"At some point we must set priorities and do those things most critical to our constituents," Richardson said, explaining that these faculty members were pulled from other positions and reassigned to focus on environmental education and community development. "This change represents one of those decisions."

The new positions, Richardson said, came in response to a series of community forums the LSU AgCenter conducted across the state.

The newly assigned community economic development agents will focus on entrepreneurship and small business development; retention, expansion and development of the work force; leadership; and cultural-, historical- and natural resource-based opportunities, according to Dr. Deborah Tootle, who is leading the team.

"Our rural presence enables us to implement economic development programs and activities in areas most likely to be overlooked by other organizations and state agencies," said Tootle, a community and economic development specialist in the LSU AgCenter's Department of Agricultural Economics and Agribusiness.

For more information on the scope of programs offered by the LSU AgCenter, contact your parish office or visit the Web site at www.agctr.lsu.edu.

Drought hits Louisiana trees

The two years of drought that occurred in 1999 and 2000 have had many detrimental effects on our forests and urban trees. Most of these negative effects are not catastrophic, especially now that we are receiving an adequate amount of rainfall. The critical time when we need good rainfall is the growing season, which is spring and summer. The rain that we received in February and March was good, but we need continued abundant rainfall throughout the summer for our trees to fully recover from the drought.

Most healthy and well-maintained urban trees have survived the drought with little ill effects aside from a showing of growth. It is the over-mature and chronically stressed trees that have had the most problems. Typically the old water oaks and some other species that were already declining before the drought are the ones that have suffered the most losses. Many of these trees probably should have been removed long ago.

There has been an increased incidence of the ipps beetle because of the drought. The ipps beetle is an insect that attacks urban pine trees in a similar way that the southern pine beetle affects pine forest stands. Many homeowners in Louisiana have lost pines to this beetle during the drought. There is no practical control. Infected trees die quickly and must be removed. A return to normal rainfall is needed before this increased infestation will be abated.

Another aspect of the drought that has had a detrimental effect on trees is an increase of wildfire forested areas. The drought greatly increased wildfire occurrence during the summer months when fires burn hotter and therefore kill more trees. These dangerous summer wildfires destroyed thousands of acres of forest in Louisiana last year. Several rural homes were also lost to wildfire.

Louisiana Blueberry Recipes

Blueberry Charolotte
*2 pounds fresh blueberries
1-1/4 cups sugar
2 packages ladyfingers
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup cold water
4 eggs
1 cup heavy cream
1 can whipped topping
1 sprig of fresh mint

Combine blueberries and 3/4 cup of the sugar in large saucepan. Place over low heat, just until blueberries yield some juice. Raise heat, bring to boiling. Lower heat, simmer until blueberries are tender, about 10 minutes.

Force blueberry mixture through sieve. Return 1 cup of the puree to saucepan. Cook until reduced by half. Cool, set aside, cool remaining puree in large bowl.

Stand ladyfingers upright around side of 10-inch spring form pan. Cover bottom of pan with remaining ladyfingers, fitting them neatly together.

Sprinkle gelatin over water in small bowl. Let stand to soften, 5 minutes. Place bowl in simmering water, stirring to dissolve gelatin.

Beat eggs in large bowl until foamy. Gradually beat in remaining 1/2 cup sugar until very thick and light-colored, 8 to 10 minutes.

Stir dissolved gelatin into blueberry puree in large bowl. Fold in egg mixture until well blended. Place in large bowl of ice and water to speed setting. Chill, stirring often, just until the mixture is thick enough to mound slightly when spooned, about 5 minutes.

Beat heavy cream in small bowl until stiff. Fold into blueberry-egg mixture until no streaks of white remain. Pour into prepared pan. Spoon reserved, reduced blueberry puree over top. Fold in partially to create marbled effect. Refrigerate at least 4 hours or until set. Decorate top of charlotte with canned whipped topping in a lattice design and garnish with a fresh sprig of mint.

Blueberry Jam
4 cups crushed berries, (about 1-1/2 quarts whole berries)
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 box powdered pectin
4 cups sugar

Wash and thoroughly crush fully ripe blueberries. Measure 4 cups; add lemon juice. Measure sugar and set aside. Place berries in a large flat bottom kettle, add pectin and stir until dissolved. Bring to a full rolling boil that cannot be stirred down. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat, skim with a metal spoon, and pour into sterilized jars to within 1/4 “ of top. Seal with new lids and process in a water bath canner at a simmering temperature for 10 minutes. Yields: 7 half-pints.

Blueberry Peach Cobbler
Filling:
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/4 cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups sliced peaches, (about 4 medium or two 2 10-1/2 ounce package frozen peaches)
1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries

Topping:
1 cup flour
1/2 cup sugar
1-1/2 teaspoon baking powder
Mixture of 2 tablespoons sugar & 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup softened margarine or butter
1/2 teaspoon salt

To make filling, mix sugars and cornstarch, stir in water, and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add lemon juice and fruit. Turn into a greased 2 quart baking dish. In a mixing bowl, sift together dry ingredients for topping. Add milk and margarine and beat until smooth. Spoon over fruit and sprinkle with sugar-nutmeg mixture. Bake at 375 degrees F. for about 45 minutes. If frozen peaches are used, omit 1/4 cup granulated sugar.
